I have resigned. The Government pears to go on much the same, but appears to go on much the there is a spoke out of its wheel, never-theless. I was clerk of the Senate committee on Conchology, and I have thrown up the position. I could see the plainest disposition on the part of the other members of the Government to debar me from having any voice in the counsels of the nation, and so I could no longer hold office and retain my selfrespect. If I were to detail all the out-rages that were heaped upon me during the six days that I was connected with the Government in an official capacity, the parrative would fill a volume. They appointed me clerk of that committee on Conthology, and then allowed me no amanuensis to play billiards with. I would have borne that, lonesome as it was, if I had met with that courtesy from the other members of the Cabinet which was my due. But I did not. Whenever I observed that the head of a department was pursuing a wrong course, I laid down everything and went and tried to set him right, as was my duty to do; and I never was thanked for it in a single instance. I went, with the best intentions in the world, to the Sec-retary of the Navy, and said:

gut is doing anything but skirmishing around there in Europe, having a sort of a pic-nic. Now, that may be all very well, but it does not exhibit itself to me

You ought to have heard him storm

One would have supposed I had com-mitted a crime of some kind. But I didn't mind. I said it was cheap, and full of republican simplicity, and per-fectly safe. I said that, for a tranquil pleasure excursion, there was nothing

Then the Secretary of the Navy asked me who I was; and when I told him I was connected with the Government, he wanted to know, in what capacity. I said that, without remarking upon the singularity of such a question, coming, as it did, from a member of that same Government, I would inform him that I was a clerk of the Senate committee on Conchology. Then there was a fine storm! He finished by ordering me to leave the premises and give my attention strictly to my own business, in future My first impulse was to get him removed

However, that would harm others besides himself and do me no real good, and so I let him s'ay.

I went next to the Secretary of War, who was not inclined to see me at all until he learned that I was connected with the Government. If I had not been on important business, I suppose I could not have got in. Lasked him for a light

(he was smoking at the time), and then I told him I had no fault to find with his defending the parole stipulations of Gen. Lee and his comrades in arms, but that I could not approve of his method of fighting the Indians on the Plains. I said he fought too scattering. He ought to get the Indians more together-get them together in some convenient place, where he could have provisions enough for both parties, and then have a general massacre. I said there was nothing so convincing to an Indian as a general massacre. If he could not approve of the massacre, I said the next surest thing for an Indian was soap and education. Soap and education are not so sudden as a massacre, but they are more deadly in the long run; because a half massacred Indian may recover, but if you educate and wash him, it is bound to finish him some time or other. It undermines his constitution ; it strikes at the foundation of his being. "Sir," I said, "the time has come when blood curdling cruelty has become necessary.

Inflict soap and a spelling-book on every Indian that ravages the Plains, and let

The Secretary of War asked me if I was a member of the Cabinet, and I said I was—and I was not one of these ad interim people either. (Severe, but merited.) He inquired what position I held, and I said I was clerk of the Senate committee on Conchology. I was then ordered under arrest for contempt of Court, and restrained of my liberty for the best part of a day.

I almost resolved to be silent thenceforward, and let the Government get along the best way it could. But duty called, and I obeyed. I called on the Secretary of the Treasury. He

"What will you have?"

said "Rum punch."

The question threw me off my guard.

He said, "If you have got any business here, sir, state it-and in as few words as possible."

I then said I was sorry he had seen fit to change the subject so abruptly, be-cause such conduct was very offensive to me; but under the circumstances I would overlook the matter and come to the point. I now went into an earnest ex-postulation with him upon the extravagant length of his report. I said it was expensive, unnecessary, and awkwardly constructed; there was no descriptive passages in it, no poetry, no sentiment— no heroes, no plot, no pictures, not even wood cuts. Nobody would read it, that was a clear case. I urged him not to ruin his reputation by getting out a thing like that. If he ever hoped to succeed in literature, he must throw more variety into his writings. He must beware of dry de-tail. I said that the main popularity of the almanac was derived from its poetry and conundrums; and that a few conundrums distributed around through his Treasu ry Report would help the sale of it more than all the internal revenue he could put into it. I said these things in the kindest spirit, and yet the Secretary of the Treasury fell into a violent passion. He even said I was an ass. He abused me in the most vindictive manner, and said that if I came there again meddling anything.

During the whole time that I was connected with the Government it seemed as if I could not do anything in an official capacity without getting myself into trouble. And yet I did nothing, attempted nothing, but what I conceived to be for the good of my country. The stings of my wrongs may have driven me to unjust and harmful conclusions, but it surely seemed that the Secretary of State, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Treasury, and others of the work! They know their importance to the nation, and they unconsciously show it in their bearing, and the way they order their sustenance at the restaurant—but they work. I know one who has to paste all sorts of little scraps from the newspapers into a scrap-book—sometimes as many as eight or ten scraps a day. He doesn't do it well, but he does it as well as he can. It is very fatiguing. It is very exhausting to the intellect. Yet he only gets only $1,800 a year. With a brain like his that man could amass return their sustenance at the restaurant—but they work. He said they had, and I entered they were all there; but nobody offered me a seat. They stared at me as if I had been an intruder. The President said:

"Well Significant with the layer of their country, and to in an authorized and suffer for $2,500 a year. What they write has to be written over again by other clerks, sometimes; but when a man has done his best for his country, should his country complain? Then there are clerks that have no clerkships,

The Hon. Mark Twain, Clerk of the Senate committee on Conchology."

Then he looked at me from head to foot, Then he looked at me from head to foot, as if he had never heard of me before. The Secretary of the Treasury said:

"This is the meddlesome as that came to recommend me to put poetry and conundrums in my report, as if it were an almanac."

The Secretary of War said:

It is too expensive. Mind, I do not object in pleasure excursions for the naval officers—pleasure excursions that are in reason—pleasure excursions that are economical. Now, they might go down the Mississippi on a raft. a disposition to debar me from all voice in the counsels of the nation. No notice whatever was sent to me to-day. It was only by the merest chance that I learned that there was going to be a Cabinet meeting. But let these things pass. All I wish to know is, is this a Cabinet meeting, or is it not?"
The President said it was.

"Then," I said, "let us proceed to business at once, and not fritter away valuable time in unbecoming fault-findings with each other's official conduct." The Secretary of State now spoke up, in his beniguant way, and said:

"Young man, you are laboring under a mistake. The clerks of the Congressional committees are not members of the Cabinet. Neither are the doorkeepers of the Capitol, strange as it may seem. Therefore, much as we could desire your more than buman wisdom in our deliberations, we cannot lawfully avail ourselves of it. The counsels of the nation must proceed without you; if disaster follows, as follow it well may, be it balm to your sorrowing spirit, that by deed and voice you did what in you lay to avert it. You have my blessing. Fare-

These gentle words soothed my troubled breast, and I went away. But the servants of a nation can know no peace. I had hardly reached my den in the Capitol, and disposed my feet on the table like a Representative, when one of the Senators on the Conchological Committee came in in a passion, and

"Where have you been all day?" I observed that, if that was anybody's affair but my own, I had been to a Cabinet meeting.

"To a Cabinet meeting! I would like to know what business you had at a Cabinet meeting ?"

I said I went there to consult-allowing, for the sake of argument, that he was in anywise concerned in the matter. He grew insolent then, and ended by saying he had wanted me for three days past to copy a report on bomb-shells, egg-shells, clam-shells, and I dont't know what all, connected with conchology, and nobody had been able to find

This was too much. This was the STEAM ENGINES, MILL ONK feather that broke the clerical camel's back. I said: "Sir, do you suppose I am going to work for six dollars a day! If that is the idea, let me recommend the Senate Committee on Conchology to hire somebody else. I am the slave of No faction! Take back your degrading commission. Give me liberty or give me death !"

From that hour I was no longer connected with the Government. Snubbed by the department, snubbed by the Cabnet, snubbed at last by the chairman of a committee I was endeavoring to adorn. I yielded to persecution, cast far from the perils and seductions of my great of-fice, and forsook my bleeding country in the hour of her peril.

But I had done the State some service, and I sent in my bill :

The United States of America in account with the Hon. Clerk of the Senate Committee on Conchol-

Not an item of this bill has been paid, except that trifle of $36 for clerkship salary. The Secretary of the Treasury, pursuing me to the last drew his pen brough all the other items, and simply marked in the margin, "Not allowed." So, the dread alternative is embraced at last. Repudiation has begun! The na-tion is lost. True, the President prom-ised that he would mention my claim in his Message, and recommend that it be paid out of the first moneys received on account of the Alabama claims; but will he recollect to do it? And may not I be Foring and dressing the Hair. forgotten when the Alabama claims are paid? Younger claimants than I may be forgotten when the Alabama claims are paid. I am done with official life for the resent. Let those clerks who are willing to be imposed on remain. I know numbers of them in the departments, who are never informed when there is to be a Cabinet meeting, whose advice is never asked about war, or finance, or commerce, by the heads of the nation, commerce, by the heads of the nation, any more than if they were not connected with the Government, and who actually stay in their officer day by developing the several issues of SEVEN-THIS at the most favorable market rates into Five-
